rom Lebanon (Mr. Coleman) will put me very trongly against the bill. They have brought up he subject of the general railroad law. I remember with what eloquence the Senator from Erie (Mr. Lowry) last winter, and last winter a year ago, advocated this subject of a free railroad aw. Some of us did not see it in that light. Now, he comes with the same arguments, that these same outrages will be committed, unless we allow everybody to go into the farm of his neighbor for the purpose of carrying off oil to the river or railroad. We passed a general railroad law last winter that I believe was satisfactory to nearly all the great railroad men of the Senate, and especially to the Senator from Lebanon, the chairman of the Railroad Committee, and I believe he so announced to the Senate. Now, what are the facts? Notwithstanding we have this general railroad law, we passed several railroad bills to day; and there has not been, as was predicted by some Senators on this floor, a single mile of railroad made under the general ill.

Mr. Coleman. Will the Senator allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. Fisher. Certainly.

Mr. Coleman The Senator has certainly been misinformed. If he will take the trouble to inform himself before he makes a speech, by going over to the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, he will find that he is misinformed.

Mr. Fisher. In what respect?

Mr. Coleman. There have been a number of charters taken out under that law, and the roads are now being built. It is a shame to the Senate and to the Legislature of Pennsylvania, in my humble opinion, that we have passed a special charter this session.

Mr. Fisher. I am very glad the Senator has made this statement. I did not say there had been no charters taken out under the general law. I said that not a road had been built.

Mr. Coleman. They are being built under those charters now.

Mr. Fisher That may be But then why in the name of common sense is the Senator asking the passage of special charters here? I find on the file here to day a bill credited to the Senator from Lebanon asking the right to build a certain railroad.

Mr. Coleman. That is a supplement to a charter.

Mr Fisher. Very well. Could they not under the general railroad law build a branch road and connections?

Mr. Coleman. It would require two separate organizations where only one is necessary. If the Senator will remember, in the early part of the session I contested with Senators on that very point, both in committee and on the floor of the Senate. When the first railroad charter came up I asked the Senate to declare their intention at that time, and I begged of them not to pass a special charter this session, but the Senate decided otherwise.

Mr Fisher. That is what some of us did not see—the general railroad law in the same light as the Senator from Lebanon and the Senator from Erie. What we then said would take place has taken place, that parties would still be coming here, from year to year, asking for special charters. What we said in reference to that general law will apply to this general law. Now, we are here asked to pass a general pipe law. If we do pass this law, I suppose, next winter, and the winter after, and so long as this whale, to which reference has been made, exists, notwithstanding we may have a general law, parties will come here asking us for special legislation to incorporate special companies.

Pending farther action, the hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, the orders of the day were called and the Speaker adjourned the Senate until 10 o'clock to morrow morning.

The Torpedo Patent Case.

It will be a matter of interest to the contributors to the fund for defending the various suits brought by the Roberts Torpedo Company to enjoin the use of the Reed Torpedo, to know that the following decision has lately been rendered in the Patent Office at Washington. It will be seen that upon a careful review of the evidence in the case and a hearing of the arguments on both sides, it is decided that Roberts is not entitled to a patent, and that Reed is. The decision, of which an authentic certified copy is furnished, speaks for itself.

JONATHAN WATSON, President
WM. BROUGH, Sec'y of Committee.

UNITED STATES PATENT OFFICE

To all persons to whom these presents shall come, greeting

This is to certify that the annexed is a true copy from the Records of this office

In testimony whereof, I, Elisha Foote, Commissioner of Patents, have caused the seal of the Patent Office to be hereunto affixed, this thirtieth day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, and of the Independence of the United States the ninety third

(SEAL) ELISHA FOOTE

In the matter of interference between the application of Wm Reed for a patent for operating Oil Wells, filed Jan. 11, 186-, and the patent of E. A. L. Roberts for Method of Increasing the Capacity, &c., of Oil Wells dated Nov 20, 1866, and another dated May 1866

The questions to be decided in this case are, 1st, priority of invention between the subject matter of the first claim of Wm. Reed, and that of the only claim of E. A. L. Roberts which are almost identical ... cover the same ground ... has Reed alone his invention and forfeited his right to a patent? ... Reed's first claim is "The above described method of increasing the productiveness of oil wells by causing the explosion of gunpowder or its equivalent, substantially as above described.

The claim is The above described method of increasing the productiveness of oil wells by causing the explosion of gunpowder or its equivalent, substantially as above described.

The claim of Roberts having been approved by my predecessor, by the Examiner in Chief, the Commissioner of Patents, and Judge Carter, upon appeals in interference between Roberts et al, I concede his right to a similar claim (upon proving priority) point settled by superior authority

The testimony is voluminous on both sides, and much of it is irrelevant to the points at issue, but it is fully proved that Reed did explode a torpedo in a 1860 feet deep between June and August, 1863, with a successful result viz that of increasing the yield of oil. Roberts exploded his first torpedo in January, 1866, also with success, doubtless greater than that of Reed in his first attempts. But the Commissioner of Patents and the other members of the Board of Commissioners-in Chief, decided upon the question "What, then, is there novel for which a patent may be claimed?"

"It is the discovery of effects resulting from such explosions—that thereby wells may be made productive from which no oil had previously been obtained, and that the flow in others might be thereby renewed, which before had been exhausted."

The question arises upon the degree of success Reed attained in 1863, and Roberts in 1866, and not then

The attorneys of Roberts argue that Reed has abandoned the invention, but upon a careful examination of the facts in evidence and the authorities cited by both sides, I cannot come to the same conclusion.

I therefore decide priority of invention to be with Reed, and that he is entitled to a patent for his first claim, leaving the other three claims for future action at the usual thirty days allowed for appeal

PENALTY FOR KILLING BIRDS —By an act of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania, approved the 31st of March, A D. 1869, a penalty of twenty five dollars is imposed for the killing of any insectivorous bird, one-half of this fine to be paid to the informer. Here is an opportunity to make twelve dollars and a half and render the community effective service. There is no practice so inhuman as the killing of the pretty little songsters that warble in the sunshine and gladden our hearts It is the duty of every good citizen to prevent their destruction, and this can only be done by prosecuting those who violate the law. The birds that are classed under the head of insectivorous birds are robins, martins, swallows, blue birds, wood peckers, &c., &c., in fact all the various small birds generally seen in this latitude

VERY LATEST NEWS.

Cable Dispatches—The London Press on Sumner's Speech

NEW YORK, April 30.

London papers open their editorials with comments on the speech lately delivered by Sumner on the subject of the Alabama Claims and the relations generally existing between Great Britain and America. Writers suppress the text of the speech, however. The Star, John Bright's organ, says the claims of Sumner are so new and startling and so vaguely put, they must be regarded simply as enormous, and withal unexpected, and that if they convey merely the shadow of his instruction Minister Watley will come to the English metropolis in a very different official guise from that under which Minister Johnson, the genial diner-out, now about to bid adieu to the court and people, arrived. The Star deplores the rejection by England of the early overtures made by ex Minister Adams for a settlement of this question. President Grant is not as is said, a whole soul lover of peace as was Lincoln. He has intense determination of character, but is a Western man without that natural genius which Lincoln had, who instead of reading had actual experience of the world Grant has not the training either as a lawyer or politician. He is intensely American and the entire world is acquainted with his resolutions of purpose. After defending England from the charge of general sympathy with the Confederation, the writer confesses that the escape of the Alabama from England was both deplorable and disgraceful, forming the worst precedent. Great Britain could establish for the future in such like contingency. The Star expresses, however, its amazement at the character of Sumner's demands in reparation. If Motley's instructions are couched in a similar spirit his mission will be as fruitless as extravagance. Every one knows how anxious the British people are to deal fairly on subjects, but justly consider that if her concessions are to be merely used as stand points for farther and at present unreasonable demands, England must carefully consider her position, lest by yielding unadvisedly she should establish a worse precedent than that of burning ships on the high seas, by admitting in discussion demands which are utterly untenable and which ought to be resisted.

The Times designates the estimates of American damages put forth by Sumner as portentous, as it has already reached £422,000, and may, in future, embrace the horrible earnings of all soldiers drawn from the fields of productive labor by the war The speech, it adds, is worthy of Sumner, and deserves an impartial consideration. He wants, however, something more than national reparation from England, asking for contrition and public humiliation. The Times asserts that in this England is cruelly wronged, and America has had an useful object served Expressions of regret and penance are required by treaty. Treaties of peace, however dictated by conquerors at the head of armies, are found to be unencumbered by such expressions. An acknowledgment of moral liability for these claims has been made before, and would prejudice the controversy and stultify the proposed settlement. In the event of arbitration court, declaring England not liable to pay damages, would her apology be taken back? The views taken by Sumner's arguments on these points are puerile, unreasonable and unstatesman like. The Times argues that concession of belligerent rights to the South was a simple act, and in fact not dependent on Union blockade, for had there not been a blockade it would not have altered the case to any appreciable degree The prevailing tone of Sumner's speeches is characterized as passionate and demonstrative, and his menace betrays a one sided partizanship lamentable as coming from the representative of a great country, and Sumner makes, it is said, no complaint against France, although Napoleon was desirous of recognizing the independence of the Southern Confederacy It is alleged that though England is held forth as the only foreign power implacably hostile to America, it is not too much to say that at one moment during the war the fate of the American Union depended on the voice of England, whose sword thrown into the scale would have altered the result. She declined the contest and it evinces a degree of unfairness bordering on infatuation to leave this consideration out of the account It is a common practice with American Journalists and politicians to vilify England, and the protective tariff plan is popular with them merely as likely to inflict injury on Great Britain. Let atonement be made for the use of insulting language by individuals, and it will be seen whether England and America, by respective verdict of public opinion, will continue the cultivation of mutual respect, which is as necessary as in the private relations of life Nations as such only deal in overt acts, and these constitute merely possible subjects for pecuniary compensation.

The Standard, Tory organ, says the American Senate has done more than reject the treaty, as it has given the world reason to believe by Sumner's speech, which is endorsed by that supreme body, that it covers all questions of foreign diplomacy The English people now know what Motley will have to aim at in his efforts to arrange the Alabama claims on the basis now wasted away. In some respects good will ensue from the candor which an American Senate displays. Formerly the danger was that England would step beyond a due regard for national honor and dignity, and allow the claims, but now when the demand has assumed its present proportions, they will feel assured that even with John Bright in the Cabinet, they are safe from the chance of disgraceful capitulation. The American claims can hardly be described in serious language, and its terms do not excite indignation They might as well argue against a proposal for American troops to hold the tower of London, as a material guarantee or that the Prince of Wales should be sent to Washington and placed in the hands of the Federal authorities as hostage for England's good behavior in future The policy of England on this subject is no longer an open question. America has formally recorded her resolution that there shall be no settlement of the Alabama claims short of that England shall surrender at discretion and submit to any punishment which the the United States Senate in its supremacy over the affairs of the world, may choose to inflict

In other words, she has decided that the Alabama claims shall not be amicably settled, whatever may ensue The interval at the present day is long between national hatred and bombardment It is useless to ignore and dangerous to forget, that the feeling in America is one of intense and unmitigated hatred towards Great Britain, and that war with England would be regarded as a national luxury, but expensive war is not an agreeable solution, though involving danger rather than dishonor and it may have been made it the attitude of the American Senate was less rediculous.

England has not only admitted that such a war would be expensive, but deplorable. Under the circumstances it is probable the Americans will expect to keep the Alabama claims in reserve and await their opportunity for revenge more cheaply

PETROLEUM MARKETS.

OFFICE OF THE MORNING HERALD,
TITUSVILLE, May 1, 1869—6 p. m

The Petroleum market on the creek was much less active to day, and sales were effected at a decline of 10 a five to ten cents. At the opening the feeling was dull, there being but little demand from any other source than to cover short sales. As the short interest on the creek is small, this demand was light, and but few of the buyers offered more than $5 40 at any point on the creek. There was very little oil offering however, and four small sales were affected in the morning at $5 50 at points south of Petroleum Centre, and at $5 40 at Miller and Titusville. In the afternoon the tone was weaker, and offers to sell were made by dealers at the first mentioned points at $5 5), and at the last or a round lot changed hands at $5 3). At this price there was some demand, and up to the close offers to buy Pleasantville oil were made at $. The sales and re sales aggregated 3 1,0 barrels.

THE WONDER OF THE WORLD
The Great Incomprehensible Musical Mystery of the Nineteenth Century.
This Wonderful Negro Boy, who is attracting so much attention throughout the country, was blind from his birth, yet he plays the most difficult Operatic Pieces, not only brilliantly and beautifully, but with all the taste expression and feeling of the most Distinguished Artist He was born in Georgia, and was carried and petted, as all negro children are, about a plantation in the South, and no one particularly there afflicted with so terrible an infirmity as the loss of sight. But when the veil of darkness was drawn over his eyes, as if to make amends for the infliction upon the poor Negro Boy, a flood of light was poured into his brain and his mind became an Opera of Beauty, written by the hand of God, in syllables of Music, for the delight of the World. He is presented to the Public as surpassing everything hitherto known to the World as

SAFETY POWDER.

IMPORTANT TO

Engineers and Contractors.

We would call attention to the following testimonials:

Boston, Oct. 1, 1867.

GEN. J. G. FOSTER, U. S. A.—Sir: My great success with the Patent Powder warrants me in recommending it in blasting Corwin Rock, as I am confident with no other powder can I accomplish the work without great loss of time and increase of cost.

Your obedient servant,

GEO. W. TOWNSEND, Submarine Engineer.

Boston, Oct. 16, 1867.

DEAR SIR: I enclose to you a communication received from Mr. Geo. W. Townsend, Contractor, relative to the merits of The Patent Powder. I agree with Mr. Townsend that for submarine blasting it is the best powder we have as yet tried, and I would recommend its use under similar circumstances.

Very respectfully, your ob't serv't,

J. G. FOSTER, Br. Major General U. S. A.

The merits of this Powder are

1st. Its power far exceeds the best Gunpowder, and will therefore save a large per centage in the cost of labor.

2d. Its perfect safety in handling, storing and transportation, as it will only explode when in the hole covered with usual tamping, entire absence of air being necessary to produce explosion.

3d. Explosion generates little or no smoke, and the odor is entirely inoffensive.

4th. Water may be substituted for hard tamping.

5th. Dampness does not deteriorate it.

DARTMOUTH HARBOR, ENGLAND.

From W. TATHAM, Esq., Submarine Engineer to the Lords of the Admiralty, to the Patentee.

DARTMOUTH, DEVON.

DEAR SIR: I have tried your Powder and used it in charges of about 150 lbs. each, for Submarine Works (both in deep and shallow waters) at the entrance of this Harbor, and am happy to state that the results have been most satisfactory; the Powder is much stronger than Gunpowder; it is a very great to be recommended for submarine blasting one of its great advantages being that it may be transported and stowed without danger.

I am, dear Sir,

(Signed) W. TATHAM, Submarine Engineer to the Lords of the Admiralty.

BYRAMS BROTHERS, No. 227, Chestnut Street, PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 23, 1868.

W. H. JACKSON, Esq., President Oriental Powder Co.

DEAR SIR: I have used your Explosive compound introduced to me by your agent) for some three months. In solid rock we find it a very destructive agent. We have tested it in all ways.

About three weeks since, in the presence of several gentlemen, we exploded six holes from nine to fifteen feet deep, using from eight to fifteen inches of the compound (in accordance with the depth of the hole) with very satisfactory results. Of the fifty cases shipped to you, we have used twelve, where we should have used one hundred kegs of Blasting Powder. Our Foremen inform me they much prefer this compound on account of its safety.

Its destructive force is such it saves drilling about one hole in five. We think by what we have seen of its effects there is a great saving above Gunpowder.

Yours truly, GEORGE BEARNS, Contractor of the Baltimore Central Railroad.

W. H. JACKSON, Esq., President Oriental Powder Co., 16a State Street, Boston.

DEAR SIR: We have given your new Blasting Compound a very thorough trial in our work on Seventh Avenue, between 140th and 147th Streets, and can fully endorse what you claim for it, viz., safety in handling and superior strength.

In wet and bituminous holes and also in deep holes in solid rock for railroad cuttings, we think a very great gain would be made over ordinary powder.

Respectfully yours,

J. P. SULLIVAN, B. HEDGE, Contractors Central Park, New York.

The undersigned having used the Oriental Patent Safety Powder in blasting Oil Wells, concur fully in the statements as set forth in the following certificates.
